INTRODUCTION

The year 2008 marks the 100th anniversary of the first issue of the Florida Historical Quarterly. Over the past century the Quarterly has published a wide variety of articles concerning Florida history, and many of them have been about the Seminole Wars or subjects closely related to those conflicts. For those of us who study the Seminole Wars, the Quarterly is a treasure trove of valuable information. In order to assist those researchers who wish to mine this wonderful resource, the Foundation has put together this index of articles that have appeared in the Quarterly that pertain to the Seminole Wars. We hope you find it useful.

The index is organized in a semi-chronological order. This seemed the most useful method. We could have used alphabetical or volume order, but neither of those methods seemed to bring any order to the chaos. Some articles covered large time spans and are located where they appeared to fit best. Other articles are grouped together if we felt the subject matter warranted. Although we feel this is a complete list, we would not be surprised to discover that we had missed an article or two, primarily because the title did not suggest a connection to the wars.

If you or your local library does not have a full collection of the Florida Historical Quarterly, do not despair. With the exception of the last five volumes, the entire collection of the Quarterly is available on-line at <http://palmm.fcla.edu/FHQ>. Good hunting!

Finally, we would like to thank Dr. Sam Smith and Frank Laumer for their assistance in compiling and reviewing this index.
